

2,800 POLICEMEN TO LEARN GAME OF WAR IN CAMP

Pick of New York's Finest to Train as Soldiers at Fort
Wadsworth.

Arrangements were completed today for the beginning on May 27 of the military camp for policemen at Fort Wadsworth. The first detachment of 350 men assembled at Headquarters and Commissioner Woods outlined the plans.

The Fort Wadsworth encampment, which is to be conducted along the lines of the civilian encampment at Plattsburg, will run for sixteen weeks and will train 2,800 policemen in eight detachments of 350 men each. The camp will be in charge of regular army officers, and a company of regulars will share the quarters with the policemen and assist them in their brief but rigorous training.

About 4,000 policemen volunteered for the camp, and some 1,200 were disappointed. The policemen will buy their own black uniforms and pay for their rations at the usual Government rates.

An inspector will be in command of each detachment of 350 men. The detachment will be divided into three companies and will be officered by three captains, three lieutenants to act as quartermasters, six lieutenants to act as first and second lieutenants of companies and six sergeants to act as first and second sergeants of companies. Each company will number thirty-six privates, including a mechanic, a chauffeur and two cooks. Six members of the army now on the police force will be assigned to each detachment.

The first detachment has been ordered to assemble at Pier A at 7 o'clock in the morning on May 27 to proceed to Fort Wadsworth by boat and start in the camp routine immediately. The camp is to be a businesslike affair, run on strict military lines, but there will be a public dress parade and band concert every Sunday afternoon.

COMPENSATION LAW GIVES REMUNERATION FOR SELF-SACRIFICE

Court So Rules for Widow,
Whose Husband Was Killed
Saving Man While at Work.

ALBANY, May 12.—A workman injured while attempting to rescue a fellow employee who has been the victim of an industrial accident is entitled to remuneration under the Workmen's Compensation Law, the Court of Appeals decided today. If he is killed his widow can claim payment.

The decision was rendered in the case of Mary Waters against the W. J. Taylor Contracting Company of New York. Roger Waters, husband of the plaintiff, was killed while attempting to save the life of a companion who had been caught in a cave-in during construction of a building on Fifth Avenue, New York. The widow and three children were awarded compensation by the Industrial Commission, but the contracting company appealed.

The Court of Appeals held that the accident to Waters was an arising out of employment. "It would be a narrow and disappointing view," the opinion held, "if in judging the conduct of a workman under the remedial provisions of the workmen's compensation act, we should hold that the legislature intended to deprive him of the benefits of the act because in going to the rescue of another workman under such circumstances as arose here he has stepped somewhat beyond the scope of his employment under ordinary circumstances."

The court also upheld the award of the Industrial Commission made for the death of Ouzieburg Larsen, an employee of the same firm, who fell down an elevator shaft and was killed, while erecting a shaft.

The court held that the work he was doing at the time was incidental to his general duties, and gave his widow compensation.
